LUKE SULLIVAN

Professional Background

As a Director of Governmental Issues at Van Ness Feldman, Luke plays a pivotal role in shaping public policy, advocating for clients, and navigating the complex landscape of government affairs. He focuses on federal energy, technology and industrial policy and his in-depth knowledge of these issues has proven invaluable to clients seeking to influence federal policies and regulations.

Prior to joining Van Ness Feldman, Luke served as a legislative assistant to former Rep. Liz Cheney (R-Wyo.), where he held an issue portfolio and advised on legislative priorities. In his role, Luke also supported Rep. Cheney's investigatory work for the U.S. House Select Committee on the Jan. 6, 2021 attack on the U.S. Capitol. Additionally, Luke served under Rep. Cheney during her tenure as House Republican Conference chair, providing assistance to members throughout the entire party.

He also previously served as an Associate Policy Analyst at Height Capital Markets, where he conducted thorough research on legislative and regulatory issues and provided clients with insights into their potential effects on the financial markets.

Experience

- Provided expert guidance and produced research reports and investment strategy for clients, highlighting the impact of legislative and regulatory factors on investment decisions.
- Conducted comprehensive research on legislative and regulatory matters affecting markets.
- Organized and facilitated in-person meetings between clients, senior staffers and legislators on Capitol Hill.
- Counsel and provide support for policy priorities, including environment and energy, second amendment rights, and law enforcement.
